DEAR FRIENDS,

At United Way of Monmouth County, we see people being engaged every day. In fact, it’s what enables us to do the work that we do. Our Board, our donors and our other volunteers are engaged in countless ways: they inspire children to love books as part of our early grade reading initiative, they restore homes damaged by Superstorm Sandy and they carry out our Stuff the Bus and Warmest Wishes drives for kids, just to name a few roles. As you’ll see within these pages, these individuals embody the core meaning of Living United.

We’re about to launch one more important way to engage with the community – and it’s based on the startling fact that one in three households across Monmouth County are struggling to make ends meet. In April 2015, we’re opening the Financial Success Center as part of the new Meridian Community Resource Center at the Freehold Raceway Mall. In a seamless collaboration with Child Care Resources of Monmouth County, The FoodBank of Monmouth and Ocean Counties, Monmouth County Workforce Investment Board and Navicore Solutions, the Financial Success Center will provide comprehensive resources under one roof to help Monmouth County residents move from financial instability to economic security. These free services will range from career, budget and home ownership counseling to tax return preparation and assistance in finding quality childcare.

As we continue to reach out and broaden our scope in helping those in need throughout the region, we thank you immensely for being engaged with us. With your ongoing support and commitment, we can truly LIVE UNITED!

SINCERELY,
Dianne Talbot

When former NFL football player Carl Howard, Jr., opened the book The Day the Crayons Quit to read to the group of children seated before him, they all leaned in to get a better look. On this warm August day, the children were visiting Barnes & Noble in Freehold as part of the summer program for the YMCA of Western Monmouth County, a partner in United Way of Monmouth County’s early grade reading initiative.

Carl and his wife, Patricia, a United Way of Monmouth County Board member, volunteered for the event because they understand the importance of fostering the love of reading at a young age. “It builds the foundation that children need to progress in their education and be successful in life,” says Patricia.

Research shows that if children are still learning to read rather than reading to learn by fourth grade, it’s nearly impossible to catch up – particularly for those of lower socioeconomic status. Through partnerships with area schools and youth programs, United Way’s early grade reading initiative provides summer learning and enrichment opportunities to build reading skills and combat the “summer slide,” along with tools for families to create a literacy-rich home environment.

“United Way’s partnership provides us with resources to inspire more kids to want to read, and it’s really amazing to see their excitement,” says Mel O’Neal, Branch Director of the YMCA’s Freehold Boro Branch. “If our young people aren’t confident in their reading, I don’t know that we’re building a strong tomorrow.”

Audrey “Ma” Evans, facilitator for the YMCA summer program, is a strong proponent of making reading fun. “We’re able to help them learn to read, but also to experience reading on a deeper level,” she says. “I don’t have the words to explain the effect of the program – you have to see the enthusiasm and growth of the children to really appreciate it.”

As the book reading concludes, 9-year-old Emilee reflects on her experience with the program. “Reading makes me feel happy and proud,” she says. Her friend, 7-year-old Heaven, agrees. “They make it fun,” she says. “You get smarter as it goes.”
BUILDING SKILLS OUTSIDE THE CLASSROOM
Sixteen-year-old Jaysaan White knew he wanted to get a part-time job during high school, but he didn’t know anything about creating a resume or interviewing – until he got involved with the Career Connections program at Asbury Park High School.

A partnership between United Way of Monmouth County, Asbury Park High School and The Center for Vocational Rehabilitation (CVR), the program helped him polish his skills and land an afterschool/weekend job as a cashier at Wegmans in Ocean.

“I was so surprised and happy when I got the job offer,” recalls Jaysaan, a junior at the high school. “My mom and I love shopping at Wegmans, and I’ve always heard good things about working there. The people are great. It’s so easy to come to work.”

Jaysaan’s involvement with the Career Connections program, combined with his own perseverance, paid off. “Talking with Jaysaan was one of the most enjoyable interviews I’ve ever conducted,” says Chrissy Kreber, Acting Service Manager at Wegmans. “He’s genuine, passionate and engaged. We’re lucky to have him.”

Over the past year, the Career Connections program has worked with 73 Asbury Park High School students to help them build skills that connect them to college or a career. “From encouraging goal setting to fostering people skills, we help students move forward in a way that positions them for success,” says Lindsey Bowen, Career Connections Coordinator for CVR, who works with students one-on-one at the high school.

John Zammetti, Manager at Wegmans and a Board member for United Way of Monmouth County, understands and promotes this level of engagement by supporting the Career Connections program and many other United Way initiatives. In fact, he feels that United Way and Wegmans have a like-minded synergy that makes them a perfect match on many levels.

“The Career Connections program is important because it uniquely prepares young people in our area for success, and we want to be a part of that — whether it’s sparking a passion or building a career,” adds John. “The youth of our community is at the foundation of our workforce, and Jaysaan personifies everything we look for in an employee. He’s an absolute joy.”
EDUCATION

EARLY GRADE READING
There’s an academic achievement gap among students in Monmouth County – and it’s closely linked to socioeconomic status. In fact, 62% of fourth grade students in the lowest socioeconomic status school districts are reading below grade level, compared to 20% of students in the highest socioeconomic districts. Our early grade reading partnerships help ensure that more children are exposed to reading and enrichment opportunities that continue over the summer, fostering their success in school and in life. This program also provides tools for families to build a literacy-rich home environment.

RESULTS
• 174 students from pre-K to 3rd grade participated in the early grade reading initiative last year.
• 65% maintained or improved their reading levels after participation.
• 3,636 books were collected and distributed via our early grade reading partners.
